MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Central Intelligence

FROM:
Director, Office of External Affairs

SUBJECT: Speech for the Edward Weintal Prize for Diplomatic Reporting at Georgetown
University, 13 April 1983

STAT

1. Attached are the proposed remarks for your appearance at the Edward Weintal Prize Ceremony for Diplomatic Reporting to be given at Georgetown University on 13 April 1983. This annual prize is sponsored by the Institute for the Study of Diplomacy of the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service. Ambassador David Newsom is head of the Institute.

2. Approximately 200 people, primarily journalists, Georgetown faculty and students, will attend the ceremony. You will receive an armchair in recognition of your distinguished service in foreign affairs. Ambassador Newsom will present the chair following your remarks. You have been asked to speak on your views of journalism and the press. There is no tradition of questions and answers following the guest speaker's remarks.

3. Opposite is the agenda for the meeting (as of 8 April), last year's program, and all correspondence. This year's prize recipients are William Beecher of the Boston Globe and Professor Andrew Stern of the University of California Graduate School of Journalism. A committee consisting of Charles Bartlett (Chairman), Ambassador Newsom, Marvin Kalb, and Hugh Sidey picks the winners.

4. The Program Coordinator, Ms. Joan Twiggs, has requested that you arrive at the Intercultural Center's George McGee Library, Dean's suite, at 5 p.m. in order to greet Ambassador Newsom, prize recipients, and committee members. The ceremony will begin at 5:30 p.m. in the auditorium. The reception following the ceremony will be at the Galleria of the Intercultural Center near the auditorium and lasts till approximately 6:45 p.m. Ambassador Newsom invited you and Mrs. Casey to a dinner afterwards with the committee and the prize winners. Your regrets have already been conveyed.
